

Note: The course names and numbers below reflect the course listing for Spring 2018.

ECON 2000 (below) is ECON 2200 Principles of Economics in Fall 2017. Course content remains the same.

ECON 2000 Introduction to Economic Principles. This course covers both microeconomic theory (theories of demand, supply, production, cost, and market structures) and macroeconomic theory (theories of economic institutions, GDP, unemployment, and inflation).....4 s.h.

ECON 3250 (A/F-O) Money and Banking. A theoretical and analytical approach to financial institutions, regulations in the banking system, central banking, and monetary policy and control.....4 s.h.
Prerequisites: ECON 2000

ECON 3260 (F) Intermediate Microeconomic Theory. A study of selected areas of advanced price theory and their applications. This course balances theories with real-world applications4 s.h.
Prerequisites: ECON 2000

ECON 3270 (A/S-E) Intermediate Macroeconomic Theory. A study of the various theories of aggregate income determination and of inflation, unemployment, and business cycles. The course will also study the various views of the feasibility of counter-cyclical stabilization policy and demand management.....4 s.h.
Prerequisites: ECON 2000

ECON 3280 (D) Issues in Political Economy. The course studies the interaction between government and markets. For example, the conflicts between efficiency and the politically favorable, the dilemma of political failures and market failures. The course will also provide a forum to integrate economics and political science as we discuss current events; for example, healthcare, income inequality, and international trade 4 s.h.
Prerequisites: ECON 2000

ECON 3800 (D) Economic Issues in Public Policy and Current Events. This course is intended to be a capstone course for students pursuing the Economics Track or Minor. This course helps students develop skills in writing about, discussing, interpreting, and presenting economic policy analysis. In this class, we will analyze selected policies in a variety of formats: lectures and class discussions, as well as oral and written presentations by individual students on their own topics..... 4 s.h.
Prerequisites: ECON 3260 and ECON 3270 or approval by Instructor.

ECON 3900 (D) Special Topics. Guided research in special topics selected by conference between the instructor and student. The proposal must be approved by the instructor and reviewed by the department in advance of registration credit to be arranged

ECON 5900 Graduate Research Hours in Economics. Supervised student activities on research projects identified on an individual or small-group basis.0 s.h.